B. This should be followed not by a chronological narrative, but by an analysis of the work done separated on the main headings appropriate to the subject matter. Under a heading, for example, "Attendances on and correspondence with client" there should be included a statement of the number of attendances on the client, the total time occupied and the number of letters sent, but not the details of every attendance or of every letter.

However, where objection is lodged to the stated number of letters or attendances, the practitioner lodging the bill for taxation must remove from his file the attendance notes and copy letters claimed, and be in a position to produce same in chronological order at the taxation.
